

Contents

|                                                                                          |           |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| Chapter I: The Imagination of Youth.....                                          | 1  |
| I. The “Tianhe-1” Attracted Worldwide Attention .....                                    | 2         |
| II. The Invigorators of the “Eastern Lion” .....                                         | 7         |
| III. The Courage of Youth .....                                                          | 10        |
| IV. Borrowing Chickens to Lay Eggs .....                                                 | 14        |
| V. The Prospective Vision .....                                                          | 23        |
| Chapter II: Cutting the Wrist Like a Warrior .....                                | 28 |
| I. Sleepless Nights in London .....                                                      | 29        |
| II. Innovation and Rejecting Inferior-Quality Products .....                             | 32        |
| III. Youth is Creation.....                                                              | 38        |
| IV. The Meritorious Statesman of the “Nuclear Bomb,Missile and Satellite” Plan ..... | 46        |
| Chapter III: The Great Man Assigned Officers Tasks.....                           | 51 |
| I. The sound of spring .....                                                             | 53        |
| II. An Ambitious Promise .....                                                           | 59        |
| III. “The Imperial Sword” .....                                                          | 66        |
| IV. Seeking Speed from Innovation .....                                                  | 71        |
| V. The Yinhe-1’s Great Victory .....                                                     | 85        |

Contents

|                                                                           |            |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| VI. Goodbye, a Punching Bag of Depression .....                           | 90         |
| VII. A Monument .....                                                     | 96         |
| Chapter IV: Breaking the Blockade .....                            | 101 |
| I. Worries of the Yinhe Researches .....                                  | 102        |
| II. Impressive Achievements .....                                         | 114        |
| III. Leap into the Global Top Three .....                                 | 129        |
| IV. Launching a Rocket in the Laboratory .....                            | 140        |
| Chapter V: Young and Vigorous Strategic Weapons in a New Era ..... | 166 |
| I. The Launching of the 10-gigaflops Supercomputer Project .....          | 167        |
| II. Adventure is an Opportunity to Achieve Leapfrog Development .....     | 178        |
| III. Dedication to Hong Kong Returning Home .....                         | 192        |
| IV. Weather Prediction System .....                                       | 200        |
| Chapter VI: Planning Ahead .....                                   | 213 |
| I. The Era of Parallel Computing .....                                    | 215        |
| II. Decisive Occasion .....                                               | 222        |
| III. China's Inception and World Initiation .....                         | 228        |
| Chapter VII: Time for a Decisive Battle .....                      | 233 |
| I. The "Roadrunner" Fired the First Shot in a Decisive Battle .....       | 235        |

Contents

|                                                                                                  |            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| II. The First Condition for a Decisive Battle: The "Chinese Core" .....                          | 239        |
| III. The Second Condition for a Decisive Battle: "Chinese Kylin" .....                           | 252        |
| IV. The Third Condition for a Decisive Battle: "China's First Network" ...                       | 265        |
| V. The Fourth Condition of the Decisive Battle:"China's Number One Supercomputer Team" ..... | 277        |
| Chapter VIII: Standing on the Top .....                                                   | 297 |
| I. The Road to Surpassing the Competition .....                                                  | 299        |
| II. The Breakthroughs .....                                                                      | 310        |
| III. Charging in All Directions .....                                                            | 321        |
| IV. Go Out of Asia .....                                                                         | 334        |
| V. In Pursuit of a Greater Victory .....                                                         | 340        |
| VI. The Peak .....                                                                               | 348        |
| Chapter IX: Championship and Dominant Strength .....                                      | 358 |
| I. Tug-of-War for the Championship .....                                                         | 359        |
| II. Setting Out Again Quietly, Based on Past Peak Achievement .....                              | 368        |
| III. "Sprinting! Sprinting! Sprinting!" .....                                                    | 378        |
| IV. A Double-Standard Championship .....                                                         | 386        |
| V. Pillars of the Country .....                                                                  | 394        |
| VI. Superhero .....                                                                              | 402        |